

METRO PERSONAL
CONSULTANTS
BETTER THAN ONLINE DATING

Website: www.metropersonal.com.au; www.metropersonal.co.nz
Contact us: Sydney: 02-92210123; Brisbane: 07-30109264;
Melbourne: 03-96704551; Auckland: 6493776881

Friday afternoon mingling

Friday, September 22, 2017 from 5-7.30 pm at Sydney CBD

Details please contact: eva@metropersonal.com.au; or 02-922190123

Love at first sight

By Eva Chen

Many people never believe there is such a thing as “Love at first sight”. They don’t even believe there is true love in real life. However, having doubt on one hand, but on the other hand they still hope that one day they might come across true love at first sight. Anyhow, human nature sometimes can be so paradoxical.

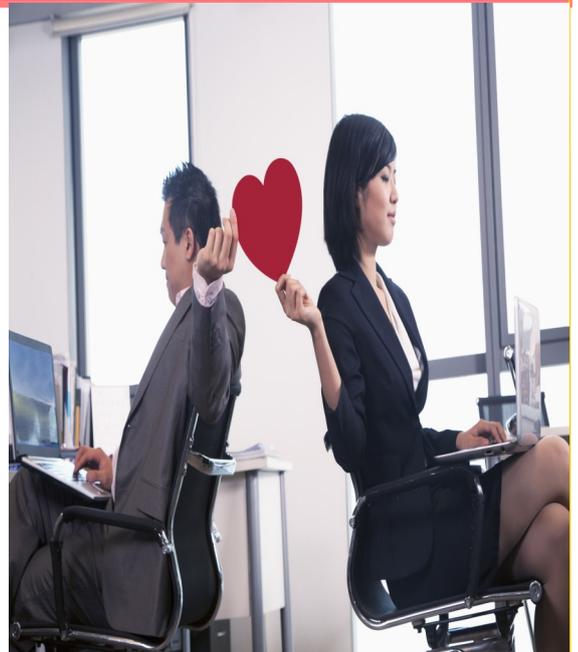

I used to have a male client. He was so confident about his judgement over photos. He said to me if I like her looks on the photo, she would be my wife. His “love at first sight” didn’t even need to meet that person. It could happen just by looking at a photo. He selected three photos. I said to him if you were so confident about your judgement, you would marry three people at the same time. He said he would choose one among the three. In the end, he met all three women. None of them would meet him the second time.

Why would people believe that life-time happiness can rely on one sighting, or a couple of meetings? Why even doubt it, would people still hold the hope that it may happen in their life?

I think the description of love stories in movies, or in books, needs to take some responsibility for this attitude. In those love stories, love is described as so like a fairy story, so passionate and so unbelievable. At a bus station, a man and a woman can be locked into each other’s eye contact and then fall in love. The rich boss would madly fall in love with his humble secretary once she walks into his office. The millionaire master discovered himself in deep love with his servant just by bumping into each other at the corridor.

I won't say these stories never happened in real life. But I believe it won't happen very often. Even if it happened, I don't know how many lasted happily ever after. The picture of a fairy story is not only sweet, but is also easy to obtain. It can be happy instantly after two people meet. It is like a double edge sword, giving hope and creating false expectations.

The other reason for people to like a “love at first sight” experience is the fear of failure and hurt. They don't like to be rejected. They hate to be hurt. The love story in movies and books have skipped the process of steps in the relationship. It jumps straight to the result, which is what people hope to have. The result of love is sweet, but the process can be complicated, challenging and hurtful. People can waste their time and emotion in relationship without any result, or good result. To some people the hurt from a relationship is unbearable. They can take a lot of challenges in business, finance, even health, but can't deal well with the hurt from a relationship. Often, we heard the stories about emotional related murder, suicide. Many people want the result of love, but don't like the process. That's why the concept of “love at first sight” suits them and gives them hope.

“love at first sight” rarely happens in real life. Even it happens, it doesn't guarantee long-term happiness. The description of “love at first sight” takes away the fun, the challenge when two people are trying to know each other and to build a solid loving, caring relationship. So, I can't say “love at first sight” is a good beginning of a relationship.

Our new female members

She is only 27, but has been living and working in many countries. Being born and raised in Japan, but educated in UK. She is the youngest surgeon in Australia.

Not just being pretty and smart, she is such an enthusiastic and interesting person, very talented, open and positive.

She would love to meet someone who has similar attributes . For more details Email: eva@metropersonal.com.au

She is from Thailand, 29 years old, tertiary educated and very pretty. At the moment, she is taking a further study in Australia for the improvement of her career.

She loves smiling, always being friendly and polite to people.

She would love to meet someone who is genuine, open and loving.

For more details: eva@metropersonal.com.au

She is a 40 years old nurse, working and living in Sydney, about 5'4", being slim with great posture.

Being born and raised in China in a loving family, she has such a loving and warm character. As a nurse, she is dedicated and compassionate. As a friend, she is fun, active and easy to get along with. She loves sports, climbing, music, etc.

For more details, email: eva@metropersonal.com.au

Remarks: In order to protect the privacy of our clients, the photos displayed above are not for the real people. However the information is true.