Lunch at Italian Resturant in June

Hosting various social functions is one of the ways Metro introduce members. Through dining, outing, harbour cruise, after work drink, people get to know each other naturally.

At the end of June, Metro Sydney took its clients to a unique Italian restaurant, situated by Sydney Harbour. Food was splendid, but friendship and good company were the best people enjoyed. By the end of the party, some couples walked with hands holding together.

Our functions are not for profit. Some are free and some will charge for the cost. More information, please contact our local offices.

Potential Quality - Generosity

By Eva Chen

Generosity is described in The Oxford Living Dictionary as “ the quality of being kind and generous”. Generosity is a human nature of giving, without expecting anything in return. This nature comes with birth and goes with death. People with this nature response to other people’s needs , difficulties, or suffering, with kindness and generosity.

Normally when we talk about generosity, many people will immediately relate to money. Yes, generous people are generous when spending money, often not to themselves, but to others. I used to know a man who was quite careful in spending his money. If he didn’t need, he would never buy. But he was generous to others, to people who needed help. He was a regular donor to several charity organizations.

But generosity is not limited to financial aspects. A generous person would also be generous in giving his time to help others. He will be generous in giving encouragement, praise and support, when people feel vulnerable, or are discouraged.

A generous person usually has a generous spirit. His great joy is to see other people happy. Therefore when giving, he doesn’t have any expectation of receiving anything in return. All he expects back is the smile on other’s face, or the change for the better in the other’s life. The fact is that he finds it difficult to receive. So if a return comes back because of his generous giving, he would be maybe embarrassed, and find hard to take.

A generous person is also generous in accepting criticism, disagreement and even hatred. He will not be easily offended. His mind often switches to the offenders when he is criticized, or even hated. He would rather try to understand why it happens. Perhaps because someone is under stress, or having hardships in life. Instead of hitting back, or remembering, he forgives and forgets. He would never hold a grudge against others. Instead, he may look at self- improvement and make an adjustment to fit in with others.

In all, a generous person can often put others’ interests beyond himself. But sadly, in our society, or in relationships with others, people on one hand need generosity from others, but on the other hand they don’t show enough respect to generous people. Furthermore, many people take the generosity from others as stupidity, or for granted. They use and abuse kind hearts. It happens in families ,work places, social environments, neighborhoods, certainly in some relationships and marriages between men and women as well.

Many people have been deeply hurt because of giving, and being generous to others. But, it is in their nature, so they can't change. When someone has a need, or some situation happens, they will respond in exactly same way.

I guess many people would agree with me and some people even relate to me about my understanding of generosity. When we look at people by nature, we know if a person can be generous to others, he must be generous to the ones he loves. Therefore finding someone with this nature becomes almost the most important thing. Let's look how a generous person deals with the partner in a relationship or marriage.

When two people are living together, or spend significant time together, the initial excitement from chemistry will not last too well, because every day, they have to deal with many small issues with each other, and to cope with the things they don't agree with each other. That includes mental, physical, financial, social, children, parenting, etc. Sometimes the issue can be as insignificant as what brand of the bread they should buy.

All these small issues need generous hearts to cope. A generous person will never use people. He will be happy to contribute his share of responsibilities; He will be very understanding when the other party can not contribute as much as he does.

Not just because of responsibility, a generous person does everything for one reason: to make his partner happy. As long as it can bring a smile to his partner's face, he will do it. It may mean he has to forget his own needs, or compromise his own interests. But he will just do it.

A generous partner will never be stingy in giving words of praise and encouragement. He will be truly happy to see his partner's achievements.

Very importantly, a generous partner forgives. He has a poor memory of criticism. He doesn't like arguing, nor want to prove himself. In a word, he doesn't have a big ego. He takes criticism if he makes a mistake. Or he holds the criticism inside, by understanding the partner may suffer from stress, or health problems.

I can list so many things what a generous partner can bring to the happiness of married life. However our challenge is how much we appreciate a generous partner and how much we are long for a generous partner. One of the ugly natures a person has, is to take things for granted, especially when we have good people around us. We often think it is meant to be, or it is good luck. This ugly nature makes us ungrateful, bullying, abusing generous hearts, until it is too late.

Therefore I urge singles to open their eyes, when searching for generous people. I also encourage people to be more appreciative, if you have found a generous partner. For happiness, we need them. For lasting happiness, we don't want to upset them and let them go!

Letter from our client

I have divorced for 10 years. For a long time, I was trying to find a suitable man to share life with. Being referred by a friend, I came to your agency. Initially I didn't hold much hope in you, because people told me many agencies were not responsible and hard to trust. But the friend who referred to me has find husband through you, which was encouraging. I stepped into your office, hoping I could be lucky.

It was totally out of my expectation and hard to believe that less than one month, you have found that person I could trust my life with. I didn't know how to express my gratitude to you. He is a gentleman, very caring, knowing how to look after people. The important thing is he loves me. At that moment, I truly believe I did right choice by coming to see you. You've found happiness for me.

I will tell my single friends about you. I hope they don't miss the opportunity to see you, the "Golden Matchmaker". You are the one who genuinely helps us to find the one who is suitable.
