

Better than online dating

Metro Personal Consultants is an established introduction agency in Australia and New Zealand.

Unlike online dating, all our clients are real. We met them and know them.

One of the keys to make Metro stand out in the industry is its professional service and the personal touch. Apart from own searching from our confidential website, our clients will also receive personal recommendations carefully matched by experienced consultants.

However no matter whether it is selected by individual person, or matched by consultants, we will deliver photos and profiles to both men and women for their own judgment. Only with mutual agreement, then can we exchange contact numbers. Our promise is: NO BLIND DATING.

Besides, we also offer supports to the communication, including confidential consultation, or obtaining feedback, etc.

Relationship meant to be romantic and fun. We want to provide this platform for genuine singles to enjoy meeting like-minded people without wasting time.

The Potential Quality (3)

In my last newsletter, I shared my understanding of the number one potential quality inside a person : Positive attitude. People with this quality are quick to grasp the opportunities in life. They are more brave in front of challenges, easy to forgive and more likely to see and learn from the strength of others. With this quality ,a relationship is much easier to survive.

Today I would like to share the second important quality: Transparency.

We may all agree that people have different personalities. We may also agree that any personality has strengths and weaknesses. There is no right, no wrong. However, some strengths in the personality are more appealing than the others, especially when it comes to a relationship. People with those strengths are more likable, easier to deal with.

In life, some people do not feel easy to open up themselves. They don't like to share their emotions, or to express their thoughts easily. Even when they do open up, they just do it partially. Most of the time people around them have to use their own imagination to work out the things unsaid.

On the other hand, there are people who are naturally open and transparent. They don't hide their emotions, or their thoughts. They are not afraid to share and discuss even if it is a personal matter. They are not shy about apologizing if they are wrong. People usually describe them as "what you see is what you get".

Being open and transparent doesn't mean people need to be silly, or reveal everything publically, or not to be private. What they share are the things which are unnecessary to hide. They share these things in order to help others, and to understand them. They have no fear that people may use what they have said, to attack them. They are always prepared to explain if they are misunderstood.

When it comes to a relationship, being open and transparent really helps in making for trust and understanding. These people don't need others to use imagination or make assumptions. With transparency, no matter whether something is good, or bad, right or wrong, people always know where the transparent person stands and what they should blame, or correct. That is just the fairness people deserve.

Because being transparent, people can trust them, rely on them,. Even if the relationship ends up with a fight, people still respect those who are transparent.

I have met many open and transparent people. They are an inspiration to me. They encouraged me to be open and transparent myself.. I know it is impossible to wish for everyone being open and transparent. But what a wonderful relationship it can be if your partner is an open and transparent person!

Dear Betty,

Introduced by friend, I came to see you last November. Early December I returned to China and came back to Auckland this Feb. Just in a short 3 months, you always tried very hard to communicate with me, helped me and taught me how to deal with others. Now I have found my true love. I am a woman in love! I am so happy every day, because he is so gentle and kind. He looks after me and my son so well.

It was you that I can have the happiness today. Again, I express my sincere appreciation. May your company go strength to strength, helping all the people who need happiness to find their happy live! Also bless you to be more beautiful.

Thank you!

Lisa
