The Potential Qualities (1)

Every day, I can hear people telling me: I am looking for a good person. What is a “Good person”? He can be kind and honest? But a kind and honest person may not be attractive. Or He can be cheerful, easy going? But a cheerful and easygoing person may not be able to offer what we want. When coming to the selection of the right person, so many feel challenged and confused.

I believe finding a good person needs a vision, not a list. The vision is to see the potential qualities which make a good person who will bring fun and happiness to the relationship.

Here are few qualities we should seek.

- A. Positive attitude
- B. Non-complication and flexibility
- C. Emotional openness
- D. Curiosity
- E. Big heart
- F. Humble and grateful.

In life, most things will change. But there is something never changes. It comes from the birth and leaves with the death. It is called “nature of a person”. The above mentioned qualities are part of that nature.

I remember Chinese leader Mao Zhe Dong used to say: Dealing with thousands of change with the unchangeable. If we apply this statement to the relationship, the unchanged the nature of a person will help us to deal with all the changes in life. Thus, the relationship stays.

In next few newsletters, I will explain why the qualities mentioned above are that important for a relationship. How can those qualities in reality to overcome challenges, crises, problems, different views, different personalities and different demands, which commonly destroyed many relationships and marriages.

However each person and each relationship has its own course. The information I share here may not be suitable to every case, or every person. So while reading, it is subject to your own understanding and experience.

The happy couple of the month

Congratulations!

Recently we were informed by Jack that he and his beautiful girl friend Evelyn were engaged. We congratulate them both and sincerely wish their life is filled with happiness and joy. Here is his letter:

Dear Eva and the staff,

Thank you for introducing Evelyn to me. From the first date after meeting her, I knew she is mine. We have had so much fun together. I really love this girl. You know what? I proposed to her on her birthday last week and she said “Yes” to me.

Thank you for your wonderful service. Hope you are happy for us.

Kind regards

Jack
