Happy Chinese New Year to you all. Soon we are entering into the Year of Pig. According to Chinese zodiac, Pig is the last one among 12 animals cycle. According to Chinese horoscope, it predicts the year as :

A year of fortune and luck when we can make good money and invest. It would also be a good time for love and friendship. Though a feeling of fulfillment would be there.

The year is blessed with Yin energy throughout which balances our lives in general. We would be able to live a carefree life as the Year of the Pig marks the end of one complete cycle of the Chinese zodiac. Hence most of the animal signs would get a deserved break during the year. A good time for some introspection, do forge ahead for the following year of the Rat which marks the start of yet another cycle of the Chinese zodiac.

Congratulate those who were born in the year of Pig and best wishes to everyone for a prosperous, peace and happy year of Pig. Hope you take advantage of a good year and find the right person for your life.

Asian Women in 21st Century

In the traditional Asian culture, the role of a woman was to look after the husband, raising the children, respecting the parents. In any public occasion, women had to stand behind their men. They couldn't freely speak. Time has changed. Mao Zhedong said, women should share half of the sky. Nowadays, women no longer need to rely on men to survive; women can be independent; women have opportunity to run a business; women can build up themselves; women are protected by the law and the society. They can live with own will. However the liberation of women's social status have made some women believe they don't need men at all. Women can do anything men do. For example: men can run business, so can women. Men can be CEO, many women achieved that, too. Men could go to club with friends and get themselves drunk, so can women. Men can build and fix the house, women can do it without men's help. Men can focus on the career without worrying about the family, many women do exactly the same. Many men don't believe marriage anymore, neither do many women. In a word, many women become more masculine

The contrast between traditional Asian women and the Asian women in 21 century is huge. Some people are still missing the traditional character. Some people believe modern women are more interesting. No matter what people expect, time has changed, so has people. For many Asian women, the challenge is to keep the positive influence from the traditional culture, while taking advantage of what modern society has offered, striving to balance and achieve the best.

I was born and raised in China, having been living in Australia for over 30 years. Personally I experienced the change as an Asian female. In next few articles, I like to share my observation and experience how to be an Asian woman in 21 century.

The first change I have seen in Asian women is their independence.

To be mentally independent.

Old time, women were not supposed to make big decision. Most time their parents, or husbands made decisions for them. In Asian culture, women like to share their emotion, their life with people around them, including family and circle of friends. These two characters decided Asian women had the culture of relying on others mentally. When a woman is asked to make a decision, it is not uncommon to hear her reply: "I must ask my parents", or "I need to talk to my friends" Unfortunately advise from family or friends often make thing more complicated. While modern Asian women have changed this mentality. They become more and more independent in thinking, decision and judgement.

To be emotional independent.

Many Asian women used to rely on men's love and their children to get happiness. Without them, they feel lonely and insecure. Once feeling insecure, they lose the drive to do other things. However modern Asian women know how to balance their emotion, being self-sufficient. They pursuit different interests, they join different social group. Through the activities, they find their value, being happy and content. With or without men, with or without their children, they survive well.

c. To be financially independent.

In China, some young, pretty women still dream to be a rich man's concubines so they can run an easy life, to have the supply without hard working. By doing that, they often pay big price, including their pride, freedom and respect from others. However modern women believe it is not too difficult to provide a good life style by themselves, as long as they work hard, knowing the principle of money management. Financial independence not only displays a woman's ability and attitude, it also wins respect from men. Eva Chen 0433560668
