The Women Who Can Make Men's Heart Beat Faster (2)

There is a saying: A man's heart follows his ego. If you massage his ego, his heart follows you. If you challenge his ego, his heart will fall from you. What is the man's ego in a relationship? I believe it is his ability to protect and provide for the woman he loves, which makes him feel like a man!

For a man, nothing can make him happier than when a woman thinks:

He is capable. He has overall knowledge and experience in life, and is able to solve a problem and provide a good life.

He has a good brain He is calm, logical, knows what he wants, and what decision he should make. No matter what happens, he can keep a clear mind.

He is romantic. In reality, men are not as romantic as women. But if a man is criticised as not being romantic, his ego will be hit, because "not being romantic" equals "his woman is not happy". Usually at the beginning of the relationship, men are very driven. They will copy a romantic scene from movies, or ask their mates for tips. This usually disappears very quickly. However most men still like to hear from their women "He is romantic".

He has been recognised and encouraged. To be recognised and praised by the women they love is the number one source of ego men want to have. They want their women to recognise their ability, the things they have done, etc.

Unfortunately, many women do not understand this need of men. Without even knowing, they often challenge men's ego. They often challenge men's ego without knowing.

Continue...

Continues from the previous page....

For instance, some women can be too independent. They never ask men to do things for them. When men offer to help, they often reject them. When men take them out for dinner, they insist on paying their own share.

Sometimes, men like to buy gifts for their girl friends or wives. However, upon receiving the gifts, some women do not show appreciation. It may be because they thought it is meant to be, or they don't like the gifts men choose for them.

The above example from some women, often make men feel they are not capable enough to make a women happy, or these women simply do not need men at all.

Opposite to these women, there are some women who are smarter. They know how to massage men's ego and make men feel like men. They don't mind asking for advice, or help, from men. Whatever they receive from men, they never fail to show appreciation and excitement. They often praise and encourage their men for anything they do right. They make men feel like men. Their message for the men is: "I need you." Actually many of these women are smart, and independent. They don't need to rely on men. But they just understand what men need.

Because of their understanding, these women often make a man's heart beat faster. They let men see the value of looking after their women. It is a truly win win situation!!!
