

Is winter cold? Not necessary if you have sweet kisses when waking up, hot dinner when coming home, warm arms around you when watching a movie on weekends... No matter how cold it is, love can warm you up!

Today, the COVID-19 pandemic has affected our social life. You may feel more isolated than ever before. However, love can always inspire and support you during these extraordinary times. We hope you all can find a lover who is reliable and willing to walk together with you.

Highlights

On 20 May, we made a short film to help people understand how this special day - 5.20 - is interpreted in Chinese culture today. As the pronunciation of 520 in Mandarin sounds very similar to "I love you", we gathered a group of beautiful people to express love to their beloved ones. If you missed out on the day, please click on the link below to watch it. Hope you will enjoy the video!

Tell me about your passions/interests

This question let you get a sense of what your date feels strongly about. It's also the perfect way to gauge whether her/his interests are compatible with yours.

Tell me about your family and friends

Talking about his/her family and friends can help you understand more about who he/she is today and why. Plus, people can go on forever about their families and close friends, so this is a great topic to fill any awkwardly long pauses with.

How did you spend your day?

Breaking the ice with a simple, straightforward question like "How did you spend your day?" Those small details and what she/he chooses to focus on, whether food or music, help you to get to know your date's personality and life quality.

Try to avoid questions which are too personal or too sensitive, such as past relationships and political topics.
